OREGON STATE ROWING HISTORY

In the fall of 1926, two rowing shells arrived in Corvallis by train with the California football team. They were a gift from the California Rowing Club and, at the time, they were stored in the basement of Fairbanks Hall. By 1929, the Oregon State Rowing Club (OSRC) was under way and won its first race against the University of Washington.

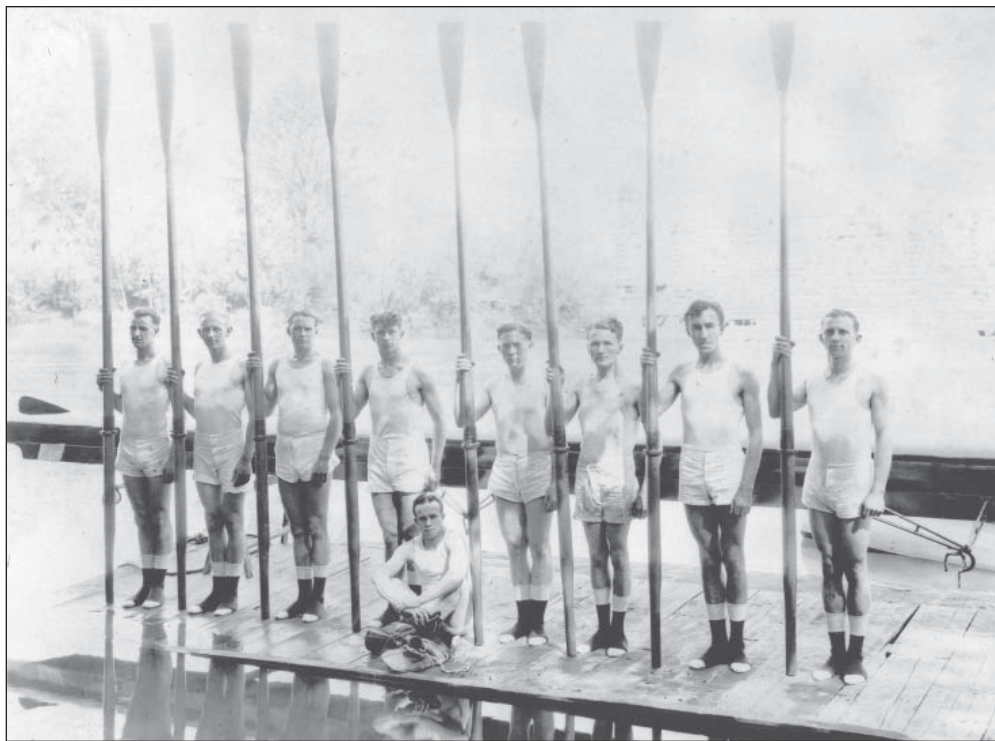

By 1935 the crew was traveling up and down the coast in search of competition. Crew was temporarily suspended during World War II, but received a tremendous boost in 1950 when the OSU business office purchased 160 acres of land on the east side of the Willamette River about a mile from campus. The new land would be developed into the Trysting Tree Golf Club and a waterfront facility that would become the home of Oregon State University rowing.

Throughout its history, rowing at Oregon State has been led by committed and visionary coaching. Ed Stevens, a former Harvard coach, took over the reins from Mechanical Engineering Professor J.P. Othis. Stevens guided the program from 1931 to 1949 and during this time the program gained recognition and respect as a highly competitive crew.

Karl Drlica took over from Coach Stevens and would lead the program for the next 30 years. One of Coach Drlica's first moves was to establish women as an integral part of the program when he started intramural competition in 1952. OSU was one of the first collegiate programs to support women's rowing.

The achievements of Coach Drlica and his crews were recognized in 1967 when the Board of Intercollegiate Athletics accepted the men's heavyweight crew as a varsity sport. Ten years later, Coach Drlica would orchestrate the elevation of women's and lightweight rowing to varsity status as well.

In 1983 the athletic department hired Dave Emigh to assist with the crew program and in 1985 he was named the head coach. Emigh spent 11 years at OSU and continued to develop the program with the same innovative styles of his predecessors. Under Emigh, the crew achieved stability within the athletic department and firmly established itself as a leader in West Coast rowing.

Current men's head coach Fred Honebein joined the Oregon State family in 2004 and led his squad to a ninth place finish at the Intercollegiate Rowing Association Championships. The Beavers' finish marked the fifth straight year they had finished among the top ten in the nation and the eighth time in ten years.

Honebein, a former U.S. Olympic rower, continues the tradition of excellence in Oregon State rowing this year through adding depth to the program and returning four-man shells to the lineup for the first time in several years.

Charlie Owen has been at OSU since the fall of 1991. Under Owen's guidance, the OSU women have competed in the NCAA Championships three times in the last nine years, finishing as high as seventh in 1997.

During his tenure, Owen's crews have regularly been ranked among the nation's elite, appearing in the Collegiate Rowing Coaches Association top 20 on a routine basis over the years.

FORMER OSU ROWERS, HANSEN AND INMAN, GETTING IT DONE FOR THE NATIONAL TEAM

Oregon State has long been a powerhouse for men's rowing, providing 13 different athletes to the highest levels of rowing in the U.S. And over the past five years, a pair of former Beavers have represented America and the Oregon State rowing program particularly well.

OSU graduate Josh Inman ('03) earned 2005 USRowing Male Athlete of the Year after winning the 2005 World Rowing Championships with the U.S. National Team. In addition, Inman's former teammate at OSU, Joey Hansen ('01) helped his boat to a gold medal at the 2004 Olympics in Athens.

On top of these impressive honors and accolades, Inman and Hansen have something else in common... neither had rowed prior to arriving at OSU.

Inman learned to row his first year at Oregon State after a successful cross country and track career at Hillsboro High School in Hillsboro, Ore. "I took the rowing class like a lot of freshman (at OSU)," he said. "By the time we got to our first racing season in the spring, I was hooked."

From the start, Inman showed remarkable talent, according to Matt Imes, Inman's freshman coach at OSU and current national team assistant. "The question was, did he have the drive to do what it takes to achieve his potential?" Imes said.

Inman put any doubts to rest in January 2004, when he began training with the U.S. National Team during the Olympic selection process.

"I think it opened up his eyes to the commitment and the sacrifice it takes to get there," Imes said. Inman didn't make an Olympic boat, but did win a seat in the coxed four that eventually won a bronze medal at the 2004 World Championships in Spain.

Inman says he takes his training one day at a time, but the 2008 Olympics in Beijing "has always been in the back of my mind."

Hansen has a similar story. He knew nothing about rowing prior to his freshman year at Oregon State, but at 6-foot-6 and 215 pounds, Hansen had the physical tools to succeed. What he needed was the technical expertise of the OSU coaches to begin to reach his potential.

"Our coaching staff really worked with me a lot on technique," Hansen said. "They just kept pushing me every single day. They'd say 'You've got to change this,' and finally, I changed some things... and things started falling into place."

Mix the coaching with natural athletic ability and a relentless work ethic, and Hansen has proven that one can create success for oneself in rowing.

During the fall of his senior year, the Bakersfield, Calif., native recorded one of the fastest ergometer times in the country, even topping United States National Team rowers.

That feat only set the pace for the final stage of his career at Oregon State, as the three-time All-Pac-10 first-teamer led OSU to 10th place at nationals before graduating Oregon State. He then went on to become a three-time member of the U.S. National Team after earning one of eight seats in the country's most prestigious boat, the heavyweight eight, which took the gold medal at the 2004 Olympics in Greece.

"It's such an endurance sport," Hansen said. "It's a training sport. The more you train, the faster you are and the better you get. I've got an engineering degree from Oregon State, and that means a lot. The engineering school here is awesome."

Former Beavers Joey Hansen (above) won Olympic Gold in 2004, while Josh Inman (below) earned the 2005 USRowing Male Athlete of the Year.

THINGS TO KNOW ABOUT OREGON STATE ROWING

PHYSICAL TRAITS

The three most common physical traits coaches look for in searching out potential rowers are height, strength, and endurance. Of course, a successful athletic background does not hurt, either. Most of the oarsmen on the Oregon State University crew were successful high school athletes - often from sports other than rowing (track, soccer, cross country, and basketball, to name a few). However, over and above an athlete's physical attributes, any coach will tell you the most important characteristic in a successful rower is the sheer, unrelenting desire to succeed.

TRAINING AND RACING

Crews are on the water from autumn to spring, with spring being the true race season. The spring season runs from March through the beginning of June. In addition to the training done on the water, crews will also spend time in the weight room and on indoor rowing machines (ergometers).

In collegiate rowing, the chief competitive focus is on racing eight-oared shells. The standard race distance is 2,000 meters, conducted in a head-to-head format, where there may be up to six crews racing each other at a time.

In the typical season, the Oregon State crew maintains a roster of approximately 40 student-athletes. The travel squad typically includes a varsity eight, junior varsity eight, a varsity four, and freshman/novice eight.

During the spring racing season, the team will travel to competitions up and down the West Coast - from San Diego to Victoria, British Columbia, and east to face programs such as Wisconsin and Boston University. The Pacific-10 regatta is the season-ending championship, traditionally held at a California locale. If crews qualify at the Pac-10 Championships, they travel to the Intercollegiate Rowing Association Championships, held in Camden, N.J. on the Cooper River.

FACILITIES

Oregon State University enjoys one of the nation's finest rowing facilities, located just one mile from campus. The main boathouse has two storage bays and a workshop bay, along with a fully equipped athletic training facility. The boathouse has storage room for 28 eights and oars. The shop bay is equipped to handle anything from minor repairs to major restoration of wooden and composite shells. The small boathouse has storage for 10 fours, 12 pairs, and eight singles.

"The Barn," built in 1907, sits adjacent to the OSU Boathouses and locker rooms. The building is a complete land-based training facility with ergometers, weights and a classroom for video analysis.

The Stephens locker room has lockers, showers, and a drying room for over 50 athletes.

The strength barn has two levels - the main level contains 30 Concept II ergometers, in addition to a classroom/video room. The upstairs level has a free-weight circuit and 30 ergometers. The facility also has 200 feet of lighted launching dock and seven safety coaching launches (motor boats).

The facility also includes a separate building behind the main boathouse that houses a 16-person rowing tank. Oregon State is the only university on the west coast with tanks.

In Corvallis, the Beavers practice on the Willamette River, which borders the east side of town. OSU hosts races in Vancouver, Wash., on the waters of Vancouver Lake and near Eugene, Ore. at Dexter Lake.

Constructed in 1999, OSU's 16-person rowing tank is located behind the main boathouse. Oregon State is the only university on the West Coast with tanks.

Located on the first floor of "The Barn" is OSU's ergometer training room. The room houses 30 Concept II Ergometers.

The top floor of "The Barn" contains a weight/circuit training facility and 30 ergometers.
